motherhood. The world has always been blessed with heroes from the very dawn of time and she will have heroes till time shall be no more, but all the heroes that ever perished are small in comparison with those that have yielded up their precious lives on the altar of motherhood.

During the critical period of babyhood and early youth what would life be without motherly love and tender care? From 7 to 17 k is here more than elsewhere that burdens rest on her heart. Who is it that is ever read-don was a visitor in town Sunday.

than elsewhere that burdens rest on her heart. Who is it that is ever read-iest to give good advice and counsel? I wish that every growing boy and girl might listen to the teachin - of the cross, might hear the veine of Jesus at Calvary, Son, beheld thy mother! Is it not well that one day in the year be that well that one day in the year be set apart to celebrate the immortality of a mother's love?

evening the demands of the Mason Tenders' union are turned down, in accordance with the expression of the meeting held earlier in the week, at which the builders did not favor the increase.

The meeting Saturday evening was called that National President D'Allersandro, who had come here to look into the matter, might be present and present the claims of the union and get a general understanding of the matter. He made a statement to the builders of what was wanted by the union, namely, the increasing of the daily wags so that the minimum would be $2.50. This is what had previously been understood to be the amount at which the tenders would return to the light it out.

One of the master builders sixted Sunday evening that the association by its vote Saturday evening carried out the policy which has existed throughout the affair, and they are not intending to grant the increase. What the result will be he could not say, and didn't know whether the men would return to work or continue to stay away.

A Greeneville Boy in Providence. Earl Osborne has been the guest of his parents on Prospect street since Wednesday and returns this week to Mission Opened at St. Mary's—Local Basebali—Personals.

At the Greeneville Congregational church Sunday evening Rev. Charles H. Ricketts preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon on Our Mothers. The text was John 19:27.

We are living in an age, the speaker said, in which every idea, religious, scientific, social, fraternal, industrial and achietic, gathers around itself its adherents. We have organisations for old and young, and last of all a day has been at apart as Mothers' day. It was the suggestion of a large number of members of the second state of the sunday and refurnat this week to Providence, where he will resume his trade of baker. For the past several wears Mr. Osborne has been in Providence and his visit at his old home in Greeneville marks the end of a several months' vacation. After spending the winter in Cape Cod, Mr. Osborne went to Augusta and Richmond, Me., and now has just returned from a brief visit in Brooklyn, N. Y. His many friends will be glad to hear of his good location in Providence.
